

Report of the Centre for Reformation and Renaissance Studies to Victoria College Council for the Academic Year 2005-2006

As a result of the departure of William Bowen, who relinquished his second term as Director of the Centre for Reformation and Renaissance Studies in order to take up a high-level administrative position at the Scarborough campus, the Centre found itself with a new director this year who was appointed first as Acting Director (June 2005—January 2006) and then as Director (February 2006—). With the invaluable help of the Assistant to the Director, Dr. Kim Yates, and of the dedicated members of the various committees that supervise many areas of the Centre's operations, the past year has been an active and successful one. In addition to the regular events held, there were some new developments at the Centre as well.

The academic side of the Centre's operations has been a central focus of attention and area of activity this past year. The undergraduate Renaissance Studies Program has seen the continuation of strong enrolments, which have doubled in the past five years. Enrolment in Renaissance Studies courses now stands at 179 students, with combined Majors and Minors at 38. Through the efforts of the program's Co-ordinator, Nicholas Terpstra, the program has expanded with the addition of a specialist program which includes requirements for research and languages. A senior course titled "Special Topics in the Renaissance" has been added to the offerings, and a new course, VIC141 ("The Renaissance in Popular Culture"), has been included in the Vic Pathways first-year program, and may well interest students in the Renaissance Studies Program.

At the graduate level the plan for a collaborative program was revived. The proposal for an M.A. and Ph.D. in Early Modern Studies that was worked out by the former CRRS director, in consultation with faculty members representing many disciplines, has been a most useful working document. Consultations have taken place with both the School of Graduate Studies and all potentially interested departments, a number of which have already indicated their intention to collaborate in the program. Much work remains to be done, especially in light of the restructuring of the School of Graduate Studies and the need to present the proposal to several university bodies before it is submitted to the Ontario Council of Graduate Studies; however, it is hoped that by the fall a fully documented proposal will be ready to be officially presented.

The CRRS continues to enjoy high visibility as a result of its many programs that attract participants from within and outside the university in the Toronto and southern Ontario area. The Centre held its traditional events again this year, including Friday workshops and palaeography seminars. Forty-eight events took place between May and April and particularly during the fall and winter academic terms, attracting approximately 1,400 participants. The highlights were, in the fall, the Erasmus lecture, delivered on October 6, 2005 by Irena Backus of the Institut d'Histoire de la Réformation, Université de Genève, who spoke on the topic "Saints, Sexual Deviants or Cyphers? Sixteenth-Century Lives of Continental Reformers" and the lectures given on March 21 and 23, 2006 by the Distinguished Visiting Scholar, Ann Rosalind Jones of Smith College who gave illustrated talks on "Exhibiting Others: Early Modern Costume Books in France and Italy" and "Costume, Custom, and Change: The End(s) of the Costume Book".

The CRRS sponsored international conferences again this past year. The main one, on "Creating Women: Notions of Femininity 1350—1700" (Nov. 11—12, 2005), was organized by Manuela Scarci and Jane Abray with assistance from Konrad Eisenbichler. It received full funding from SSHRC and support from many units of the University, attracted participants from as far away as Israel, and had one full session in French. A unique feature of the event, moreover, was the participation of students from courses taught by the organizers and by Nick Terpstra. These undergraduates filled Alumni Hall and added considerable energy to the sessions. CRRS also sponsored a two-day international seminar that was supported by a second full SSHRC grant and organized by Erika Rummel, on October 14—15, 2005, on "Sources of the Reformation: Correspondence of Wolfgang Capito and Fellow Reformers".

The events co-sponsored by CRRS consisted of the lectures presented throughout the academic year by the Toronto Renaissance and Reformation Colloquium (chaired by Manuela Scarci), the Annual Conference on Editorial Problems (with the Centre for Medieval Studies) organized by William Robins, a conference on "The Body in Medieval Culture" (with the Centre for Medieval Studies) organized by Suzanne Akbari and Jill Ross, and the second annual Canada Milton Seminar (with the Department of English and the Canada Research Chair Programme) organized by Paul Stevens.

Two other activities, namely a well attended discussion on The Da Vinci Code and a lecture by Nicholas Terpstra, the Associate Director of CRRS, were co-sponsored together with the Renaissance Students' Association, a group that was formed last year to give undergraduate students in the Renaissance Studies Program opportunities to meet outside the classroom.

The idea of a Renaissance Spring Festival that had been suggested in the past was proposed again this year and, with the support of the senior administration at Victoria, has become a reality. The Co-ordinator appointed to the event, Manuela Scarci, has prepared a complete program for the spring of 2006 and has begun sketching out plans for the 2007 edition as well.

The number of Distinguished Senior Fellows at CRRS grew by one this year. The new appointee is James Carscallen, whose long record of service to the CRRS community, and deep and abiding interest in mentoring graduate students, have made him an extremely deserving recipient of this honour.

The library collection that is at the very core of the CRRS continued to grow in 2005—2006 through the regularly funded acquisition of rare books, microfilms, and modern books, and also in part through donations made to the library collections funds and as a result of the direct donation of materials. It has become obvious that, as the library continues to expand, the space requirements of the Centre continue to grow. Usage of the collection has shifted recently: the number of visits by patrons has decreased slightly but the number of books consulted, especially rare books, has increased. This would seem to suggest that fewer students are using the space merely as generic space, and that increasingly, those who use the library do so specifically for the specialized collection. It is gratifying to note that some of our rare books have been on display this past year at book exhibits held in other parts of the U of T campus. Thanks go to the Chief Librarian Robert Brandeis for the support he provides to our library and to the Centre in general.

This was an active year in the area of publications too, where some restructuring was necessary. New online distribution arrangements for our now more than 90 titles have been made with Google, and our inventory, previously stored in the Old Vic attic, has been moved to the parking garage at Rowell Jackman Hall where we now rent four parking spaces. Two new books have appeared in the Essays and Studies series edited by Konrad Eisenbichler. Both are selling well and the most recent, titled Sacrilege and Redemption in Renaissance Florence: The Case of Antonio Rinaldeschi by William Connell and Giles Constable has received a very favorable review in the Times Literary Supplement. A new editor for the Tudor and Stuart series, Ted McGee of St. Jerome's University, Waterloo, has joined the Publications Committee. The three Centre journals, two of which are SSHRC subsidized, have continued to publish, and three issues of the CRRS Newsletter were produced and circulated during the past year.

In the area of electronic Publications, Ficino, a moderated online discussion list, now has 794 members from 30 different countries. In 2005—2006 the Iter partnership for the development of online resources, instituted by William Bowen, produced approximately 145,000 new records for the online bibliography, one-half of which were generated by students affiliated with CRRS. This database now totals 895,000 records. During the past year, one independent scholar, twenty-one graduate and two undergraduate students were employed through the CRRS to work part-time on the Iter project as Iter Fellows and part-time research assistants. This work was financed through the resources of the CRRS plus external funding from Iter Inc. and, for the Iter Fellowships, matching funding from academic units within the University of Toronto.

Generous donations from our private supporters (especially Stephanie Corbet) continue to enable us to enhance the activities at CRRS. A special expression of gratitude goes to President Paul Gooch and Principal David Cook for their strong support of the manifold operations of the Centre.

Respectfully submitted,

Olga Pugliese,
Director

FICINO: A moderated online discussion list with 794 members from 30 different countries.

ITER: A partnership for the development of online resources. In 2005–2006, approximately 145,000 new records were added to Iter's online bibliography, of which 70,000 (a 16% increase from the number produced in 2004–2005) were generated by students affiliated with CRRS, to bring the total to 895,000 records for articles, essays, books, and reviews. In addition to this central bibliography, Iter has databases for individual scholars, associations, and institutions, as well as specialized research finding aids.
